About Dr. Susan Love Research Foundation

Established in 2000, Dr. Susan Love Research Foundation, a 501(c)3 non-profit organization, is dedicated to achieving a future without breast cancer by engaging the public and the scientific communities in innovative research.

We do this through performing and facilitating innovative and collaborative research, translating science to engage the public as informed partners, and inspiring novel research.

Through the Army of Women[®] and The Health of Women [HOW] Study[™], Dr. Susan Love Research Foundation has engaged more than 380,000 volunteers nationwide who are willing and able to participate in research that will advance progress in identifying the cause and prevention of breast cancer.

About the Symposium

The key to identifying the cause of breast cancer and determining methods to prevent it lies in understanding the normal human breast and how it develops malignancy. To accelerate progress, it is critical to transition the study of the breast from animal models to humans. New technologies for DNA/RNA analysis and procedures to obtain samples or observe human breasts in situ are opening up promising new avenues for exploration. The International Symposium on the Breast brings together a multidisciplinary and international group of iconoclastic researchers, clinical scientists, advocates, and challenge participants to formulate new technical approaches to the study of the normal and high-risk breast.

Dr. Susan Love Research Foundation will host the 9th International Symposium on the Breast in February 2017 at Le Meridien in Santa Monica, California.

Goals for the Symposium:

- Foster application of next generation science and new methods to access the normal human breast to identify the cause of and prevent breast cancer
- Inspire new approaches by engendering multidisciplinary collaboration in stimulating, non-clinical environment
